FOR ALL ON STORMY SEAS:

While we may ponder the stormy seas of our lives,

struggle with our fears, we ought to also pray:

For all who earn their livelihood from the sea;

For all those who give service to the Irish Coastguard and Royal National Lifeboat institute, and its work;

For seamen, the Naval Service and their chaplains;

For those sailing under flags of convenience;

For those working on the cross-channel ferries, and the ferries off our coast;

For those working to bring us food from the sea: fishermen and fish farmers;

For those drilling for oil and natural gas;

For all divers.

We remember that all these face difficulty and danger.

We give thanks for their knowledge of the sea, their courage on putting out into the deep, their patience and their skill.

We pray:

For all those who cause pollution or environmental or ecological damage through negligence, carelessness, gree or accident, remembering that as we benefit from their harvest, so we share the responsibility for its side-effects.

For those anxious about over-fishing and those trying to protect fish stocks and other sea creatures;

For hose whose hobby is angling, sailing or boating.

We give thanks:

For the work of the Waterways Ireland;

For the beauty of our rivers, canals and coasts;

For time for recreation.

We pray for those without clean water or with no water supply at all.

We pray for those whose facing drought, especially in Sub-Saharan Africa.

We pray for those whose homes or work places or fields have been destroyed by floods.

We remember the poverty that forces people to live on marginal land.

We pray for those who are sick or dying because of dirty water.

We remember all those who have died at sea.

We give thanks for those who work in the water industry, who deal with flooding, pollution and those who supply us with clean water-the technicians, engineers, pipelayers... All those who work to supply us with water.

We give thanks for those who monitor the cleanliness of our beaches.

We remember our own death and resurrection in the waters of baptism.
